Ex-Mayor Returned To Office

By FRED McNEIL
Colonist Staff Reporter

PORT ALBERNI, Nov. 16 (Thursday).—Loran K. Jordan, who resigned as mayor of this West Coast city after an inquiry into alleged financial irregularities in the civic administration, today was swept back to power in a by-election.

He polled 879 votes, 173 more than the 706 for William Johnstone, his opponent in the mayoralty race. On October 26, the day that Mayor Jordan resigned, Johnstone resigned.

B.C. Waives Port Alberni Prosecutions

No action will be taken by the Provincial Government against Port Alberni council members or municipal officials for alleged misconduct in the city's financial administration, Minister of Municipalities R. C. MacDonald said yesterday.

"The order in council handed down Tuesday by the Provincial Cabinet outlines the necessary steps to be taken," said Mr. MacDonald. "It is now up to the ratepayers."

Under the Municipal Act, in case of alleged misconduct by either council members or municipal officials, charges can be laid by either the Government or the ratepayers.

UP TO RATEPAYERS

"Every provision is made for dealing with this matter under the Municipal Act," said the minister. "It is strictly a matter for the ratepayers."

Asked if the Government was washing its hands of the affair, Mr. MacDonald said "not entirely."

"If matters do not improve then we shall take action again. The men concerned have had their lesson. The Port Alberni Council should be able to set its affairs in order now."

Interference Charged, Denied, in Port Alberni

Vigorous charges of Provincial Government interference in Port Alberni's by-election were made and denied yesterday in the midst of the hottest polling day the West Coast city has ever known.

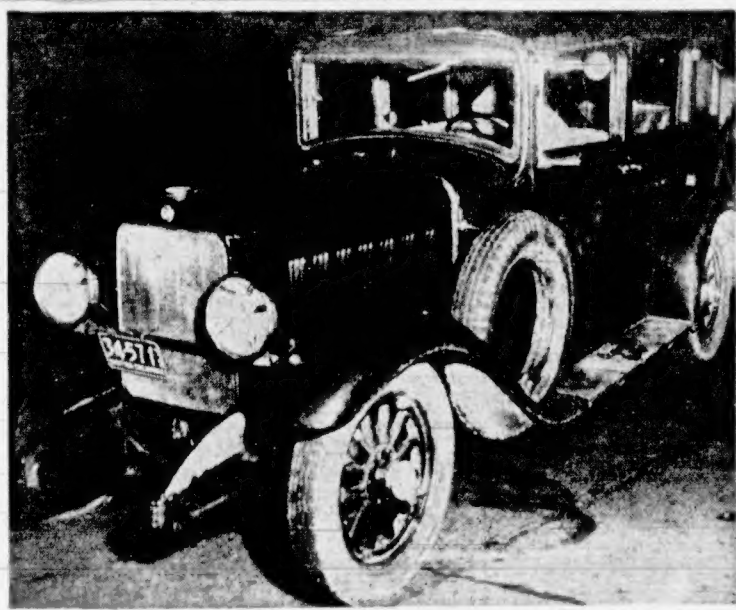

Charges were the result of the release late Tuesday, the eve of the by-election, of the report of the public inquiry into alleged irregularities in the financial administration of Port Alberni. The report, made by deputy minister of municipalities, R. C. Bracewell, was a scathing indictment of the administration.

Supporters of Mayor Jordan, re-elected yesterday after resigning when the alleged irregularities were brought to light, said they viewed the release of the report as an attempt to influence the result of the by-election. All day long they cried "Politics! Dirty politics!" And they redoubled their efforts to make sure Jordan would be returned.

Millworker Says He Drove Death Car

City police last night brought this old-style automobile to the station, and identified it as the car which killed William Savage last Friday. Car's owner, John Farmer, turned himself over to police last night. A tow truck brought in the vehicle from Farmer's Kings Road home. It is shown immediately on arrival.

Severely-Shaken Driver Visits Policeman's Home

By GORDON FORBES

A tired, shaking, sunken-eyed Victoria man last night went to the home of a city police sergeant and asserted that he was the hit-and-run driver police have sought for the past five days.

Chief John Blackstock identified the man as John Farmer, 34, 1706 Kings Road, a millworker and war veteran.

Farmer is in the city jail charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident (hit-and-run) last Friday on Douglas Street where 80-year-old William Savage, 3008 Douglas Street, was killed.

He will appear before Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court at 10 a.m. today.

About 9:30 p.m. Farmer went to the residence of Sgt. Brooke Douglas, head of the city police traffic department, at 1311 Point Street in the Fairfield district.

Opening the door, Sgt. Douglas faced the exhausted Farmer, who was in such a nervous state he had difficulty in speaking. (He was later turned over to a doctor.)

The sergeant last night declined to give Farmer's exact words but it is thought they were to the effect:

"I am the man you are looking for. I have come to give myself up." Sgt. Douglas also preferred not to disclose other aspects of the dramatic turn of events at his home.

The sergeant immediately took a statement from Farmer and then proceeded to the man's Kings Road home.

At Farmer's residence, Sgt. Douglas was shown the car for which police have been searching since the fatal accident.

It was a four-door, dark-colored 1930 Studebaker. It was locked. The license number was 24-571.

GAVE AID

A search of the vicinity turned up a car headlight. Police hesitated to give much information about the car's lights—a major part in the intensive investigation—but it is understood Farmer gave all possible aid.

When the car was towed to the police station it was observed the left headlight was broken. It is not known if this was the original headlight or if an attempt had been made to change the lights. The car had no front bumper.

When Farmer was brought to the police station by Sgt. Douglas and Constable Douglas Grant, he was reluctant to get out of the prolix car when he observed newsman.

Blackstock Praises Response of Public

Police Chief John Blackstock early this morning took off his gold-branded cap to the citizens of Victoria.

Leaning back in a big chair in his office, not long after a driver gave himself up to one of his sergeants, as driver of a hit-and-run car, the chief started to praise Victorians for the manner in which they had rallied to help police investigate the fatal accident.

Five minutes later he was still praising citizens.

"The response to our appeal for information on the hit-and-run car was terrific. It appeared the people really wanted to help us. It was most gratifying."

"I want to thank the general public, my men who worked untiringly on the case, the newspapers, the radio and everybody who helped. Such co-operation is greatly appreciated," declared Chief Blackstock.

The arrest of John Farmer, 1706 Kings Road, who gave himself up to Sgt. Brooke Douglas, traffic department head, was welcomed by weary policemen who have spent five days tracking down every possible lead.

To owners of early-model cars, it was also a welcome relief.

Shipyard Strike Here Averted By Last-Minute Negotiations

Eleventh-hour negotiations apparently have averted a major shipyard strike in Victoria, it was learned early today.

Vancouver's shipyard dispute, which has tied up Burrard and Pacific Drydocks since October 18, also has been settled, according to union officials.

Late last night word was received in Victoria that Vancouver strikers had accepted a 15-cent offer from the management of the two yards.

Members of the Victoria Joint Shipyard Council immediately held a special executive meeting and agreed to accept a similar offer.

They got in touch with the Labor Relations Board, which approached H. S. Hamill of Victoria Machinery Dept. Union officials said last night that Mr. Hamill accepted.

A meeting between union officials, Mr. Hamill and H. A. Wallace, of Yarrow's Limited, is expected to be held today to confirm the new contract.

Mr. Wallace, at an earlier meeting, offered what he said was his final offer to the unions.

BULLETIN

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP).—Police today plodded through deep snow and mud in highlands near North Vancouver in search of an 81-year-old man, missing since Monday.

Lost is Henry Harris, occupant of a one-room cabin. Five officers and a dog were carrying on the search. Harris was last seen Monday evening.

Clue to Killing

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (CP).—Police said an informant told them today that a gunman had been seen of getting $5,000 for killing former Police Lieut. William Drury last September 25.

Enemy Wedge Splits Front In North Korea

SEOUL, Nov. 16 (Thursday) (CP).—An enemy attack Wednesday drove a wedge four miles deep in the center of the front line across the narrow waist of North Korea.

The Communists struck with a battalion against a South Korean sector.

The enemy also was on the attack in greater strength on that northeast front against South Koreans near the coast. Six tanked battalions ripped five holes in the line, but late accounts said the South Koreans had restored their positions.

While there was little ground action elsewhere along the rigid fighting front, Allied planes kept up their relentless campaign of erasing enemy bases near the border.

U.S. PLANES ATTACK

Thirty United States B-29's firebombed Hoeryong on the Manchurian border in far northeastern Korea Wednesday. An air force spokesman said the huge communications center and military supply base was left a mass of smoke and flame.

The Superforts poured 40,000 fire bombs on the targets.

Hoeryong, a city of 450,000, is 41 miles southwest of Siberia's border. It was a major Japanese military base during Japan's occupation of Korea.

The attack was the 12th incendiary smash by Superfort bombers in ten days of a methodical campaign to wipe out Chinese and North Korean Communist army bases just south of the Manchurian border.

Favor Break With Saanich

Reeve Gibbs Reports Big Percentage Of Ward Wishes to Join Oak Bay

Residents of the old Saanich Ward, Three areas have indicated in "an astonishing majority" that they favor breaking away from Saanich and joining Oak Bay, Reeve P. A. Gibbs announced at a municipal council meeting last night.

Reeve Gibbs said he has just been presented with a report on the petitions being circulated in the area.

"At this date, 903 petitions have been returned, 333 property owners having yet to be heard from. These are mostly non-resident, some residing in Britain, United States and Eastern Canada."

"The petitions returned in favor of joining Oak Bay represent 72.5 per cent of the assessed value of the seceding area, and petitions returned unsigned or unfavorable represent 6.1 per cent of the assessed value. This is in the ratio of 12 to one."

"Of the petitions returned, 506 are in favor, with 87 unsigned or unfavorable. So at this date, 91.2 per cent of the returned petitions are in favor and 8.8 per cent are registered as negative responses," explained Reeve Gibbs.

The report, the reeve continued, tends to show that 80 to 85 per cent of the property owners residing in that area favor joining Oak Bay.

"This is a truly remarkable index and indeed very complimentary to the people of Oak Bay," concluded Reeve Gibbs.

The majority agreed with American delegate John Foster Dulles that the risk of war made useless any United Nations talk now on a long-range settlement of the question of Formosa.

The committee voted 53 to 0 to shelve temporarily the Formosa issue. Even the Russians voted with the majority, but Russia's deputy foreign minister, Jakob Malik, said his Government wants the issue taken right off the assembly agenda.

Radio Strike Looms in U.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—A blackout of radio and television stations across the nation was threatened tonight by six unions representing 25,000 workers in the industry.

Union leaders termed a strike call "imminent" and said the walkout will occur "this week" unless management comes up with a reasonable (wage) offer.

The Superforts poured 40,000 fire bombs on the targets.

B.C. Workers Top Pay List

OTTAWA, Nov. 15 (CP).—British Columbia workers are the highest paid in Canadian manufacturing.

New Brunswick's are the lowest in the eight provinces—Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island excepted—that have sizeable manufacturing industries.

The average hourly earnings for hourly-rated workers at September 1, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today, ranged from British Columbia's high of $1.25 to N.B.'s low of 91.1 cents.

In between were Ontario with $1.10, Saskatchewan with $1.04, Alberta with $1.02, Manitoba with 96 cents, Quebec with 93 cents and Nova Scotia with 91.5 cents.

The hourly earnings include overtime pay and bonuses of any kind. By cities, Windsor headed the list with $1.32, followed by Vancouver with $1.25 an hour. Winnipeg's figure was 98 cents.

The national average was $1.04, compared with 95 cents a year earlier. Average weekly earnings for the country were $43.74, up almost $2 from the $41.72 of a year previously.

Average weekly earnings were down from $44.29 at August 1. The Bureau said this was largely because of the nine-day general rail strike in the late summer.

The majority agreed with American delegate John Foster Dulles that the risk of war made useless any United Nations talk now on a long-range settlement of the question of Formosa.

The committee voted 53 to 0 to shelve temporarily the Formosa issue. Even the Russians voted with the majority, but Russia's deputy foreign minister, Jakob Malik, said his Government wants the issue taken right off the assembly agenda.

ALL ABOARD

By G. E. Mortimore

The excellent Gregory Clark waits that the modern Canadian house—the kitchen in particular—is built for show rather than for comfort.

It would be unkind, and probably untrue, to say the same about the modern Canadian housewife. That's something different. But if the house is guilty of discomfort, the lady should be charged as an accomplice.

For many Canadian housewives, cleanliness isn't next to godliness. It is godliness. Canadian women worship at the shrine of Soap. I know several women who polish their floor gleaming bright, then spread it with old newspapers so it won't be sullied by oilstain boots. Any attempt to shift the papers rouses reproachful shrieks.

The floor stays clean all right—but you never see it. The sunny nature of a lady we know is marred by one small foible. If you happen to flick an ash on her hearth, she bustles off to the kitchen, fetches a little broom and pan, and sweeps it up. If you drop another ash, she does it again.

She mustn't be offended if she sees this. We love her just the same.

I'm all in favor of swabbing the decks now and then to keep bacteria at bay. But please preserve me from the high priestess of the home, that hag-ridden wench who transforms cleaning into a holy ceremony, and presses husbands and visitors into service as altar-boys.

Late and soon she scours, sweeps, mops, dusts, washes, scrubs and polishes until the house is as white as a skeleton on an ant-hill, and as clean, sterile and empty as her own mind.

The Eternal Charwoman makes a methodical sanitary tour through the house, room by room, and when she runs out of rooms she begins again. She's as busy as a little beaver, though not nearly so intelligent. A beaver knows when to stop.

While Mrs. Housemaid is at work, comfort flies out the window. She sweeps it away with the trash.

The Lady with the Mop keeps so busy cleaning that she never has time to live.

Canadian housewives share this excessive sanitary zeal with their sisters in Scandinavia and Scotland. Why? The reason may be that all three countries are built on a Paul Bunyanesque scale, with big messy-landscapes rich in mud, and big men with big boots to track it into the house. Desperate ill calls for desperate remedies. The poor Scottish, Scandinavian and Canadian housewife may simply be over-compensating.

All three regions, too, are noted for dull, wholesome and unimaginative food in large quantities. It's easy to see why. When she has finished her grueling daily stint of beautifying the home, the housewife is too tired to think of anything new.

But the cleaning rite seems to have something of the nature of a nervous compulsion, like the ceaseless hand-washing seen in some kinds of neurosis. It may spring from an obscure feeling of guilt. In all three regions we have mentioned, there is a strong Puritan strain. Perhaps the housewives imagine they are sweeping out sins with the dust.

Well, we'll leave that to the psychologists. But if the Canadian male is to survive as a species, there's only one course of action open to him: save money like mad and buy two houses—one for his wife to clean and the other to live in.

Plans No New Taxes To Meet Flood Bill

WINNIPEG, Nov. 15 (CP)—Premier Douglas L. Campbell tonight announced that Manitoba will impose no new taxes in meeting its estimated $6,000,000 share of the $23,000,000 Red River Valley Spring Flood bill.

Delivering a special flood budget to the Manitoba Legislature, Premier Campbell said the Province hopes to raise all its share of the cost from consolidated revenue.

The flood is expected to cost the province about $6,000,000—or the equivalent of about one-sixth of its normal annual budget. Balance of the money will come from the Federal Government and flooded cities and municipalities.

"SOUND POLICIES"—Slightly more than $17,000,000 of the total will be required to repair damaged homes, buildings and public works, Premier Campbell said.

"We plan to draw as required on the consolidated fund of the Province to pay our proportion of the total cost," he said, "treating such payments as current expenditures."

He attributed the Province's ability to raise the money without imposing new taxes to "the sound financial policies of this and preceding governments."

It had been rumored prior to the budget that Manitoba might be forced to impose an additional gasoline tax, now the lowest in any Canadian province.

B.C. FORMULA

The Province has been guaranteed an initial payment of $12,500,000 by the Federal Government.

More money is to come on the basis of the formula used to assist British Columbia after the Fraser Valley floods of 1948. The British Columbia formula worked out to about 81 per cent of total cost.

Premier Campbell said Manitoba has not pressed for a final settlement with the Dominion because complete estimates of the over-all flood cost are still not available.

PIGEONS' RECORD

QUEENSTOWN, South Africa (CP)—A South African and possibly a world record was established by two pigeons which competed in a 1,000-mile race from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia. They arrived here at the average speed of 1,400 yards a minute.

Araucana Lays Eggs Worth $2

TORONTO, Nov. 15 (CP)—In appearance, the Araucana is a chicken with some of its component parts missing. But it has unusual talents. O. P. Johnston of Toronto, who took 11 years to develop the native Chilean breed in Canada, says it has no comb, no wattle, no tail and a "rumpless rear."

But it can lay eggs in colors produced hitherto only by the Easter bunny.

Depending on its breeding strain, the Araucana can turn out blue, chocolate, green, khaki, grey, olive or taupe eggs. Mr. Johnston says they all taste like the ordinary variety and sell for $2 each.

The original Araucanas have been bred for centuries by Indians in the Chilean hills. Mr. Johnston sells his fowl to breeders in Canada and the United States for $50 a pair.

The birds need a stand-in to do their setting as they have a tendency to peck their chicks to death. "They think they're mice," Mr. Johnston explains.

Water to Fill Dried-Up Canyon; Has Been Empty 50,000 Years

COULÉE DAM, Wash., Nov. 15 (CP)—The huge Grand Coulee Canyon, a dried-up course of the Columbia River which has been empty for 50,000 years, soon will start filling up again with water.

The canyon will hold a lake 27 miles long, two to five miles wide, and up to 90 feet deep. The lake will serve as a source of irrigation for the Big Bend country of Washington State, an area 85 miles by 65, where now there isn't much but crumpled lava and sagebrush. It is hoped to settle 1,400 families there.

This project was first visioned more than 50 years ago as diverting part of the Columbia River into the Grand Coulee, a 1,000-foot-high walled canyon the Columbia cut when glaciers dammed it in the last ice age. The river now flows hundreds of feet lower past this canyon mouth floor.

B.C.E. Chief Announces New Project

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP)—A. E. Grauer, president of the British Columbia Electric Company, announced today that a $10,000,000 hydro-electric project will get under way soon, east of the Fraser River.

Work on the project, which will develop 80,000 horsepower, will start at Jones Lake, between Rosedale and Hope—about 82 miles east of Vancouver. It will be the biggest unit in Western Canada.

Mr. Grauer made the announcement at a luncheon of 300 provincial, civic and company officials, after the opening of the company's new $4,000,000 substation at Horne-Payne.

TO SAVE FISH

The company will take precautions to preserve the fish in Jones Lake, he said.

Sufficient water will be spilled at the outlet of Jones Creek to preserve the flow of the creek at normal levels between there and where it empties into the Fraser River.

The projected new hydro-electric project will bring to more than 600,000 horsepower the energy available in the Lower Mainland area. It will provide jobs for hundreds of British Columbia workers.

Jones Lake is glacier-fed from Mount Cheam and adjacent peaks. The creek flows north, falling precipitously until it empties into the Fraser.

Mountaineers Recover Most Bodies Of Pilgrims as Alpine Villagers Pray

CROIX DE LA PIGNE, France, Nov. 15 (CP)—French mountaineers tonight recovered the bodies of 55 of the 58 persons who died Monday when an airliner carrying Canadian Holy Year pilgrims back home from Rome crashed on a peak in the French Alps.

The remaining three were thought to have fallen into an ice crevasse from which they possibly could not be recovered.

The 55 bodies were lowered in sacks by overhead cable from the peak of Mont L'Oblou near where the chartered DC-4 crashed in a snowstorm. The cable-way normally is used for logging.

The bodies were placed in the little church of this tiny French Alpine hamlet. Villagers came from surrounding hamlets to pray.

Black cloth hung in sombre mourning from the vaulted ceiling. Behind the altar hung a Canadian flag.

Mountaineers and woodsmen battled sub-zero cold and a screaming wind to recover the bodies. They toiled for nine hours today.

Of the victims, 46 were Canadian pilgrims and seven were Canadian crew members. The others were an Italian priest and an American.

Funeral services for the dead will be held tomorrow in the small stone chapel of the church here.

Most Rev. Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Quebec, will offer the funeral Mass. Because some of the crew members were Protestants, a Protestant minister has been invited from Grenoble to conduct the rites for these in the same chapel.

Archbishop Roy arrived here with the Canadian Ambassador in Paris, George Vanier; the air attaché, Col. C. Carling Kelley, and Camille Poulin, Quebec Minister of Game and Fisheries.

The victims included 14 priests, all but one of them French-Canadian, and 36 pilgrims from Quebec province.

TEARFUL YIGEL—One of the priests was 27-year-old Romano Mochchutti, just appointed secretary in the Apostolic delegation at Ottawa. His brother, Amilcar Mochchutti of Toulouse, and a sister from Rome, kept a tearful vigil at rescue headquarters here.

While they waited, four French army trucks arrived with 58 caskets from Grenoble.

One Canadian official said Archbishop Roy has suggested the Roman Catholic victims might be buried beside the shrine of Our Lady of Salette, some ten miles from the crash scene. This is one of Catholicism's best-known shrines in France.

The disaster occurred when the plane—christened the "Canadian Pilgrim"—in Montreal last Spring as it began ferrying pilgrims to Holy Year observances in Rome—struck Mont L'Oblou on the Rome-Paris leg of its homeward flight.

Units of France's famed mountain troops, Les Chasseurs Alpins, and volunteer climbers from neighboring villages toiled throughout the day in their grim task of collecting the bodies.

Labor Congress Heads Debate Communist Ban

Shown as they deliberated on admittance of two delegates to the current provincial conference of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (A.F.L.), are the following members of British Columbia executive: Biri Showler and Robert McCulloch, Vancouver Trades and Labor Council; William Sands, Okanagan Council; R. K. Gervin, Vancouver conference chairman, and Charles Peck, Victoria Council. W. S. Holgate, Northern British Columbia executive member, is not shown.

T.L.C. Ban on Red Supporters Used To Bar Two Delegates From Parley

By FRANK MEADE
A ban on Communists and supporters by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (A.F.L.) was called into play Wednesday when two of 107 delegates to the Congress' British Columbia conference in Victoria were barred from the three-day deliberations.

Monter Stevens, United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, and Peter Whittaker, Civic Employees' Union, both delegates from Vancouver, were told their credentials were unsatisfactory when the convention opened.

John Hines, a Vancouver Painters and Decorators' Union delegate, was refused admission to the morning session but was seated later after the T.L.C.'s provincial executive reconsidered his credentials.

Detwiller to Address Trade Union Critics

A critical audience will face British Columbia Hospital Insurance Act Commissioner Lloyd P. Detwiller this morning.

He is scheduled to address delegates to the provincial conference of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (A.F.L.), who Wednesday, by resolution, attacked the Hospital Insurance Act on four main counts.

Seven separate resolutions were sent to the conference, meeting in the Blanshard Street Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion, but were condensed into one by the resolutions committee.

FOUR DEMANDS
When the labor body's provincial executive meets the Cabinet before the next legislative sessions begin, they will ask:

That hospital insurance benefits be effective upon payment of the premium, and that the 30-day waiting period be abolished.

That persons with an income from any source, of less than $100 per month, be exempted from payment of premiums.

That difference between the cost of a private or semi-private hospital room and that of a ward, be covered by the patient's insurance.

Lastly, the convention delegates expressed opposition to any increase in premium rates, unless medical services are included.

INTERFERENCE
William Black, business agent of the Hospital Employees' Union, charged that the Hospital Insurance Commission is "interfering with collective bargaining."

"We signed an agreement with the Lady Smith hospital, which gave the nurses a $200 monthly wage. The Commission promptly telephoned the hospital board there and told them they would have to find the money for the wage increase somewhere else."

"The Hospital Employees' Union has no intention of subsidizing the scheme by low wages," Black said.

A resolution demanding an end to Commission "interference with the administrative affairs of hospital boards," was passed by delegates.

Speaking to the convention Wednesday afternoon, B.C. Labor Minister John Cates said that his department is always "open to suggestions" regarding administration of the Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act.

And suggestions there will be, in the form of 28 resolutions, a little more than a third of the total to be considered by the convention.

Gervin told delegates that Stevens would have to take his case "through the proper channels," to the Congress national executive.

He said that all present should know the terms of an amendment passed by the T.L.C. convention in Montreal in September, banning "Communists, their supporters and sympathizers."

Stevens, he said, had written to the provincial executive last August, stating that he had resigned from the Labor Progressive Party, because "certain groups were using the Red bogey" to disrupt the labor movement.

NOT PROOF
"We could not accept that as proof of his resignation," said Gervin.

He said the executive met with Stevens again Wednesday, and sustained the decision.

To Vancouver Pulp and Sulphite Workers' delegate, Orville Brasten, who sought to challenge the ruling and force a vote, Gervin said:

"We're not the people who make the constitution of the Congress, but we are bound by the rules. Stevens will have to appeal to a higher authority."

Although Stevens is still a delegate to the Vancouver, New Westminster and District Trades and Labor Council, that body will have to decide its own policy, and "adhere to the constitution, or relinquish its charter," said Gervin, who is secretary of the Vancouver Council.

The executive, he said, found no fault with Whittaker personally.

NEEDS CREDENTIALS
"If Whittaker could bring credentials approved by the Congress, or some other acceptable organization, we would be glad to seat him," Gervin said.

(Whittaker's credentials were signed by Donald Guise, business agent of the 1,600-member Civic Workers' Union. He and Secretary Jack Phillips were barred from the T.L.C. on grounds of alleged Communist activity. Both are now battling Congress efforts to form a new union of Vancouver civic workers.)

Spirited defence of Whittaker and Stevens came from a number of delegates.

E. E. Sturgeon, Vancouver, Street Railwaymen's Union delegate, charged the barring of the two was "ridiculous."

"Stevens has said that he has no connection with the Communist party. Who are we to set ourselves up as an arbitrary tribunal?"

SHOULD BE PROVED
Another member of Sturgeon's union, Charles Stewart, said that Stevens' alleged activity in the L.P.P. should be proved "beyond question of a doubt."

Whittaker's local, said John Hines of the Painters' Union, had not been suspended by the T.L.C. as yet, and its 1,600 members "should have representation here."

The battle over the issue was joined as soon as the convention got under way Wednesday morning at the Victoria and District Trades Council Hall, 602 Broughton Street.

No more than 80 delegates were expected to turn up for the conference, and when the small hall was jammed to capacity, it was decided to hold future sessions in the hall of the Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, 1616 Blanshard Street.

The centenary of public letter boxes, invented by Anthony Trollope, is a sidelight of the 1951 Festival of Britain.

Delegates decided to reiterate last year's demand that the Labor Relations Board prosecute, and pay costs of such action, for offences against the provisions of the act.

Plimley Centre To Be Opened In Vancouver

The ultra-modern, half-million-dollar English car centre built in Vancouver by the Horace Plimley interests will be officially opened Friday by Mayor Charles Thompson.

A far cry from its forerunner of half a century ago, which Thomas Plimley opened in Victoria at the corner of Government and Superior Streets in 1893, the new structure covers an area of more than 55,000 square feet on Fourth Avenue, between Yew and Vine Streets.

The 500-by-111-foot development consists of a repair centre with facilities for handling all makes of British cars, flanked on either side by the offices and showrooms of the Plimley Automobile Co. Ltd. and Oxford Motors Ltd.

At night, the block is illuminated by a mile of neon tubing outlining the structure.

A pre-opening display to be held tonight is expected to be attended by approximately 1,000 persons.

Citizens Seek to Aid Police In Quest of Wanted Driver

Victorians made every effort to aid city police traffic officers to track down the hit-and-run driver who fatally injured William Savidge, 3008 Douglas Street, last Friday.

Sgt. Brooke Douglass, head of the traffic department, said yesterday the response had been "terrific."

"Since we appealed for information on suspicious old model cars, dozens of persons have phoned us," stated Sgt. Douglass.

The sergeant admitted that a lot of the information supplied had not greatly aided the investigation, but was quick to point out that all of it was followed up by his men, no matter how unimportant or irrelevant it might seem.

BOYD ELECTED
J. Boyd was elected president of the Oak Bay United Church Men's Club at a recent meeting.

Other officers chosen were: A. R. C. Hebdon, vice-president; T. Barrington, secretary-treasurer; Dr. R. H. McDougall, program convener; W. H. Mayhew and J. W. Clark, visiting committee.

Retiring president is E. G. Johns, who served for two years.

SOCIAL PLANNED
A mixed social evening is planned at 8 p.m. next Tuesday, November 21, by the New Imperial Social Club. The first part of the evening will be taken up by canasta, whist and cribbage. The second half will be devoted to a bring-and-buy auction sale. All members are requested to bring something for the sale.

MAKE ARREST
Sixty detectives yesterday arrested a second man in connection with the recent theft of two bicycles.

The 19-year-old youth will appear in city police court this morning. He was taken into custody by Detectives Pearson Woodburn and Norman Bath.

Already charged with the theft is William I. L. Todd, who comes up for trial Friday.

Point Ellice Span Open; Temporary Repairs Made

Point Ellice Bridge, closed for repairs for the past month, was thrown open to traffic again yesterday.

Work on the bridge started at the middle of October when work crews began ripping up street car tracks which ran along the north half of the bridge deck. These operations disclosed serious decay in some of the deck timbers.

City Council ordered temporary repairs and made plans for a public vote on a money-by-law to pay for construction of a new bridge.

J. G. Archer, assistant city engineer, announced yesterday that temporary repairs had been completed and the bridge was ready for traffic.

Point Ellice Bridge is governed by a speed limit of 10 m.p.h. and a load limit of 14 tons.

Comedy of Errors Has Its Serious Side

PORT Alberni's civic tempest in a teapot would be diverting were it not for the fact that some serious legal questions remain after the recent exchange of left-handed compliments between the Canal City's executive body and the Department of Municipal Affairs. Diversion of money by-law funds is not regarded by the Legislature or the courts as a joke, whether it arises from ignorance of the law or from human obstinacy. If it were, a vote of the ratepayers would have little meaning and there could be no ceiling to any money by-law through the interchange of such funds. Disqualification of an elected civic representative also has certain legal consequences; and leaves without legal support all that is done subsequently by a body so constituted, while the penalty clause in the same statute is onerous enough to deter trifling.

Happily in the Port Alberni instance there does not seem to have been any suggestion of personal attempt to gain from some undoubted irregularities. Nor can it be argued successfully that the Department of Municipal Affairs has been severe in the matter, when it could have placed the Bracewell report before the Attorney-General for action in the courts. That report, sufficiently documented to carry its own story, was dated November 13. It went before the Cabinet the next day and became the subject of an order in council in which the Government said what should be done now. Had the Cabinet looked backwards as well as forwards, matters could have become more than a little embarrassing for the Canal City at this crisis in its domestic affairs.

Leaving complaint and counter-irritation aside, however, two things emerge from the development. One is that the auditors of the Municipal Affairs Department might well be sent on circuit more frequently. The other is the unsolved question of Port Alberni's interim actions, which should now be ratified in legal form or else enacted afresh.

Mount Brenton Would Be A Sound Investment

IF, as has been represented, the Mount Brenton area near Chemainus could be acquired by the Province by the simple expedient of exchanging Crown land for it, such a transaction would make a valuable addition to existing parks open to Vancouver Island people. Working against time, because logging of a forest fastness eminently suitable as a Summer and Winter park already has begun, the Outdoor Club of Victoria has petitioned the Provincial Government to take the area over before it is too late. In March last, The Colonist heartily commended these efforts to have Mount Brenton saved for the people; and it does so again.

The rustic appearance of Vancouver Island is deceptive. In actual fact the populous regions of its southern half have relatively few areas of any size to which the people have undisputed right of access and which are within easy reach by road. Acquisition of Mount Brenton now would be timely, and certainly would be in keeping with the Provincial Government's oft-stated policy of setting aside suitable tracts of land throughout British Columbia for public recreation and enjoyment in perpetuity. It is true that areas so reserved against destruction are Crown-owned already, but it should be possible for governmental policy to be adapted to meet a situation such as this.

Such limited development as might be considered desirable for Mount Brenton could wait, for years if necessary. As the club points out, the urgent consideration is preservation of the remaining stands of timber from the axe. The Province has good cause to know that forests such as those of Mount Brenton, once felled, cannot be restored in a hundred years. Acquisition of the area would be a sound investment. Nor can the Province afford to ignore the numerous public and semi-public organizations on the Island which are supporting this proposal.

The Criterion Is How Defence Monies Are Spent

IF for no other than economic reasons it would be rational to limit the extent of the Korean war, and the efforts to do so mentioned by External Affairs Minister Pearson are to be commended. Wars mean high taxes, and severe taxation is not popular. To governments depending on votes for their existence this is especially embarrassing where preparedness and not war itself is concerned, even if not to be prepared is to invite disaster.

Mr. Pearson stated recently that Canada's defence budget next year will probably be a billion dollars, a fact that emphasizes some points mentioned by Mr. Claxton to a Victoria audience this week. Canada, he made clear, hasn't the money to defend every part of its territory. A complete radar and anti-aircraft network blanketing the Dominion would alone use more than the entire budget; nor could even the United States make its defence perfect. As an example, every plane built costs half-a-million dollars. The cost of preparedness, in short, is tremendous.

All this is granted and indeed obvious, but it makes more important than ever the Defence Minister's statement that Canada's main problem is to spend defence monies in the most sensible way. It is here that this newspaper finds cause to differ from the Minister. It cannot agree that much wisdom enters into the picture when, in the light of modern conditions, a key bastion of Canada's West Coast is left practically defenceless. Some areas, presumably, are to be allotted sufficient for their needs, and it seems a queer kind of balanced defence planning that ignores fundamental protection for a vital and exposed section of the Canadian coastline.

QUEEN VICTORIA STATUE

Sir,—I venture to address you with regard to the matter of the above-mentioned statue of Queen Victoria in Dublin and offered to the City of Victoria.

I am astonished at the indifference shown by the general public and by the city council, and the difficulties put in the way of getting the statue over here and getting an appropriate site to install it.

May I suggest that Pioneer Square, adjoining Christ Church Cathedral, is an ideal site? Surely the erection of this bronze statue there would be an attraction and an asset to the city and would show to the many hundreds who pass that way every day the example of a great period, a great life and a great reign.

LIVING ON ISLAND

Sir,—One Sunday last month an article appearing in The Colonist incidentally mentioned me as being "in California." I let it pass, on the principle of "De minimis non curat lex"; but, as I practise law in twelve districts or places in and around Duncan, this "in California" is being brought to my notice time and again. (The Colonist seems to be read everywhere and with close attention.)

Many years ago, when a boy and youth, I did make some winter trips to California with my mother, the late Mrs. Eunice M. L. Harrison, and my late father, Judge E. Harrison, visited us there. We resided at Sunset Cliffs, Point Loma, near the late Madame Tingley's rather remarkable Universal Brotherhood estate, about which and many other things in California and in British Columbia, my mother has written interestingly in her autobiography "Pioneer Judge's Wife," in my possession but as yet unpublished.

However, for the last eleven years, my mother and I have resided at "Kent Place," Mt. Trouhaem, North Cowichan Municipality, five miles from Duncan, coming here after Colonel Rolston vacated the property.

Having studied law for years in British Columbia, I was called to the British Columbia Bar in 1930. I have practised law in British Columbia ever since and have no intention of leaving Duncan, B.C.

Or public fame or private breath;

How deepest wounds are given by praise;
Nor rules of state, but rules of good.

Who have his life from rumors freed,
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can neither flatterers feed,

Who God doth late and early pray
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day

"SOME FEATHERS FOR IT TO FLY WITH, MISTER VISHINSKY?"

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."
By TOM TAYLOR

As a one-time footslogger I've been following with interest the debate in the Letters to the Editor column about which regiment of the British Army is officially the "Right of the Line." In a way the subject is academic, for as of 1950 the British Army is not what it used to be—in make-up—and anyway armies do not line up and advance into battle like they were crossing Salisbury Plain.

Even so, however, it comes as a shock to find the weight of reader opinion in favor of the Royal Horse Artillery at the expense of the Royal Scots. The R.H.A. may indeed be the "Right of the Line," although why is a mystery (unless it was an artilleryman who drew up the order of parade precedence). I should suppose the first soldiers of any kind anywhere walked on their own infantry feet, which implies a seniority not lightly to be ignored.

It is a fact too that the Royal Scots is, indubitably, the oldest regiment in the British Army, as its allied unit Victoria's Canadian Scottish will be quick to tell you on the slightest provocation. Somewhere around 1633, I believe, Charles II embodied this regiment and lent it to France, but its history goes back two centuries before that to the Scots mercenaries serving French and other European kings—like the bodyguard mentioned in "Quentin Durward."

Guns boom loudly and horses make quite a stir, but even the R.H.A., you see, gallant though they are, cannot compare in antiquity with the First of Foot, as the Royal Scots are known without dispute.

A hasty encyclopedia reference tells me the British standing army—pre-war version—dates from 1645 and stems from Cromwell's "new model" army which made short work of the Stuart's Royalist forces. After the Restoration, Charles I disbanded all but a household brigade, retaining General Monk's Coldstreamers, now the Coldstream Guards (which although older yields parade seniority to the Grenadier Guards, another tantalizing anomaly). The Earl of Oxford's Royal Regiment of Horse Guards, says the encyclopedia, stood first on the establishment.

Another reader forwards a list of precedence he copied from Talbot Booth's "British Army," available in the Public Library here. This pushes the Infantryman so far down the roll I can only conclude the author was joking. First, according to our correspondent, comes the Honorable Artillery Company, then follow the Household Cavalry, the Royal Horse Artillery, Cavalry of the Line, Royal Regiment of Artillery, Royal Engineers, Royal Signal Corps, the Foot Guards, the Infantry, the Royal Tank Corps, and auxiliary corps.

In ninth place, therefore, is the Infantry of the Line, Royal Scots or any other regiment, which is altogether too much for any respectable footslogger. The Infantryman suffers ups and downs of official favor, I know. Frequently he is written off as a has-been, what with dive-bombers and what have you, except that in the end he is always called on to resume his rightful place in front of the line, right, left and centre (when the tanks don't go first).

It is an Infantry regiment, incidentally, that's going to Korea to be the right of this country's line. So perhaps, as one letter writer concedes, and he an artilleryman, the Royal Scots deserve to be termed the "Right of the Line" after all. And how, says he.

Britain Expands M.I. 5

By H. J. J. SARGENT
North American Newspaper Alliance

LONDON.—Anxiety over possible leaks of vital state secrets, aroused here by disappearance of atomic scientist Bruno Pontecorvo following his escape upon conviction of Dr. Klaus Fuchs for atomic espionage, is being translated into parliamentary action.

Four Conservative Members of Parliament have put down questions for the Government to answer about the disappearance of the Pontecorvo family and the admission of foreign funds into this country for furtherance of Communist interests.

No doubt the Government will reply in a manner which will not give away the steps that are being taken to stop Communist infiltration into Britain—Government replies to questions in Parliament have a way of giving information which leaves the questioner very much where he was before he put his question—but the fact that these questions and answers are being made in the House will usefully call attention to a grave state of affairs.

There is little doubt that public opinion is sufficiently aroused to the danger of the situation to permit expansion of the branch of Government security known as M.I. 5—responsible for counter-espionage in Britain—without protest. In the general run of things, the English taxpayer dislikes the secret service; he is not a bit impressed by it and he sees no romance in it. He likes his blue-clad, helmeted policeman who by no stretch of the imagination can be called a secret agent. But he has not much use for plain-clothes men or for the security officers of the different ministries who now abound in England and who are employed to enforce regulations made by such departments as the Food Ministry and the housing section of the Ministry of Health. Fortunately, few of these enforcement officers have powers of arrest and they are known by the generic name of "snoopers."

Now, however, M.I. 5 will be enlarged without public protest—and it is probable that the section's men may be given the status of policemen so that they may have powers of arrest. Hitherto, they could not detain people or even interrogate them unless they had been arrested first by a member of the regular police. No doubt many people allowed themselves to be detained by members of M.I. 5, and to be interrogated by them; but at any moment a citizen aware of his rights under the law could tell an M.I. 5 man to go away in more or less forcible terms and then it would be necessary to run out and find a policeman to arrest the citizen before anything more could be done.

Side by side with these activities of the counter-espionage officers, an investigation is being conducted by Scotland Yard—the proper and legitimate headquarters of the Metropolitan Police—in a racket of bogus passports. A case occurred recently in which four Italians were brought before a Metropolitan Police magistrate and convicted of using irregular passports. No great crime was imputed to them because it was thought they had acted in good faith. They were sentenced to one day's imprisonment and ordered to be deported.

It was said during the hearing of the case that the men carried Maltese passports which had been given them by a man who claimed to be English and had given his name as Pietro Camillo. Camillo did not put in an appearance in court and he is now being diligently sought. The accused said that the man had come with them to England, had found them lodgings and had provided ration books. The police informed the magistrate that they were satisfied that the man existed and that the accused had been largely let down by him. The detectives further believed that a number of other foreigners, mostly Italian, had got into Britain recently with forged passports. This situation, of course, opens the way to many possibilities and is well worth watching.

Food and Fatness

(From The Peterborough Examiner)

THERE is no doubt but that many people are fat because they are greedy, but it is also a fact that by no means all greedy people are fat. We have seen little starveling men and women with hardly an ounce of flesh on their bones, devour the most staggering meals; we have seen people who showed no special tendency to fat who crammed themselves between meals with sweets and who always took two helpings of whipped cream.

Such people appear to dispose of their food in a different way from those who become fat. Many fat people are moderate eaters. There is an injustice about this which medical science might attempt to unravel.

There are, we have observed, a good many fat doctors, and we do not suppose that they like to be branded as greedy.

It has been proven pretty clearly that excessive weight is dangerous, and that it shortens life. But many people who tend to be fat may question whether it is not better to eat as they please and take the consequences than it is to live for a few more years at the expense of a lifetime of abstinence from foods which they like.

Real gluttons are rare; people who eat more than they need are very common. The present tendency to pillory the fat man and to present him in the world as an example of swinish self-indulgence is just silly.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

Professor Nils Magnus Hohner, of Lund University, in Sweden, has mastered 200 languages. We should like to be riding with Professor Hohner some time when a careless motorist scrapes his paint.

Announced as coming up soon is a movie entitled "The Sun Sets at Dawn." Thus it has fallen to Hollywood to clear up the confusion about the International Date Line and how it works.

Old Charley Big Horse, the Arapaho, was frowning as he strode away from a half-dozen of his cronies who were squatted in a circle in front of the reservation trading post. The owner of the store, standing on the porch, said: "What's wrong, Charley? You're going home early today."

"Paw-wow too slow!" Charley grunted. He turned, pointed to an extremely pale old Indian in the group. "Old Sam Blue Feather stutler too much when he talk sign language."

An ambitious mother wrote to Alfred Hitchcock:

"Dear Mr. Hitchcock: I have a perfectly beautiful daughter. She is 17 years old, five feet three inches tall, blonde, and weighs 118 pounds. Do you think she might succeed in the movies?"

To which the famed director replied: "Dear Madam: It would be impossible to say, as you did not state her width."

Observation

Car By G.B.

AFTER all the bosh written about crime comic books it is interesting to read the following facts derived from a United States Senate crime-investigating committee report which followed a national survey:

"Sensation comic books have little influence on juvenile delinquency, and act, if at all, only as a contributing factor which may be dangerous for unstable children made vulnerable by other factors. Juvenile delinquency is largely attributable to lack of love in the home, economic insecurity, parental neglect and family bickering." J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, commented when questioned by the committee: "It is doubtful that an appreciable decrease in juvenile delinquency would result if crime comic books of all types were not readily available to children." "I suppose you will soon be giving attention to your Christmas list," a customer remarked to Bill, the Broad Street barber. "I started to make one up last week, and decided to get my wife an expensive set of English bone china," Bill replied. "That does not sound very much like you. What is the matter with getting an ordinary set like you generally use?" the customer inquired. "Well, if I get her some really good dishes she will not trust me to wash them after supper, and I shall get out of a lot of work," Bill chuckled. "Sometimes a train of thought consists of one carload of junk and a dozen empties." Russian newspapers are reported to print very little information on the Korean war. Perhaps radio broadcasting stations behind the Iron Curtain will deny there is even a war being waged. Money used to talk. Now it just emits a few feeble gasps.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

ONE of the big billboards of the Canada Savings Bonds campaign is causing considerable controversy in the cities where it is being shown. It is a large black slate on which a few childishly scrawled caricatures are drawn.

Some people declare hotly that the billboard is meaningless. Others affirm that it attracts attention the way no conventional advertisement would.

The art and science of advertising is divided into sects, like religion. Each sect has its clergy. There is nothing in religion to exceed the absolute faith of these various practitioners; and no gentleman in holy orders can excel a high-class advertising man in asserting the creed and dogma of his particular faith.

When the art of advertising was young—and all you have to do is leaf through a twenty-year-old newspaper or magazine to realize how young it is—there was no trick to dreaming up an exciting or provocative ad. But with every year of the growth of the art, it has become more difficult to devise an advertisement that will effectively seize the public attention.

One school of advertising believes doggedly in repetition, tireless repetition. You find this school both in radio and in printed advertisement. They devoutly believe that goods can be dinned into the public ear. They may be right. Another school founds its faith on price tags; another on being nimble and keeping the products in step with the constantly changing season and the whims of fashion.

There is another school of advertising, that of the Big Boss. When a man has succeeded in building up a great enterprise, what more natural than that he should suppose he knows more about advertising than anybody else, including professional advertising men? This idea, designed by the Big Boss, are easily recognizable. As a rule, they stink. It could be that Prime Minister St. Laurent drew this new billboard for the Canada Savings Bonds.

Loss of Power Dam Severe Blow in East

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

By JAMES D. WHITE
Associated Press News Analyst
Why would a country go to war over a power dam?

Concern over the great Yalu River power dam on the Korean-Manchurian border is the reason given most often for the entry of Chinese Communist troops into North Korea. More than a power dam is involved, of course, but this particular dam is the focus of the things that are writing the history of its setting.

Suho dam is the heart of one of the world's great electric power systems. It was built by the Japanese before the war and so hooked up and entwined with the economy of two countries that only destruction of the dam itself may ever untangle the ties the Japanese created.

About 350 miles to the north in Manchuria they built a higher but slightly smaller dam at Hsiao-feng-man near Kirin. In Korea they already had several smaller dams.

A number of steam-powered plants existed or were built in the coal-rich central bread-basket of Manchuria. Over the Korean mountains and across the prairies of Manchuria marched the transmission lines. From Wusan and Chonglin on the East Korean coast, almost to the Gobi Desert, they carried energy to the cities and towns.

The impact of power as a source of light, communications and manufacturing potential upon such a human setting was correspondingly greater. Hands that could not write could throw a switch, or hold metal up to a whirling lathe, and there were jobs.

This went on in Manchuria from Harbin in the north, down through Changchun and the big industrial city of Mukden, and the iron smelters and synthetic rubber and gasoline plants of Anshan, to the big southern port of Dairen.

In other words, if you weakened this great power grid by knocking its heart out at Suho, you play hob with the lives of people.

So the loss of Suho could make a lot of Manchurians sore at the Government that allowed it to happen.

Rate for Power Must Go Up, Grauer Hints

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP).—A boost in British Columbia electricity rates was hinted at today by A. E. Grauer, president of the B.C. Electric Railways.

The possibility of a price increase was suggested when Mr. Grauer announced that a $10,000,000 hydro-electric project will get under way at Jones Lake, 82 miles east of here by the end of the year.

Despite the vast expansion program launched since the end of the World War, he said, there "have been no increases in electrical rates."

"It is obvious this situation cannot continue indefinitely in the face of ever-increasing costs," he added. British Columbia consumer rates are among the lowest in North America, he said.

The painting which brought the conflicting views was a cubist job entitled "Conflict."

It did not win a prize.

Teen-Ager Wins Title For Wheat

TORONTO, Nov. 15 (CP).—Five of the six seed-growers who won 1950 world championships today they would come to the Royal Winter Fair, Saturday, to pick up their prizes.

All will be given the welcome due to the fair's premier titlist, but a special red-carpet greeting is in store for 13-year-old Ricky Sharpe of Munson, Alta.

The schoolboy, first junior farmer to win a world grain championship, grew the sample of Thatcher wheat judged best in the show. The same sample also won the wheat contest sponsored by the Canadian Council of Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

PROMISE TO COME
Of the other grain champions, only John Elluk of Hairy Hill, Alta., oats champion, will not be present. Saturday Albert Kessel of Rosetown, Sask., barley winner; Chris Morick of Dickson, Alta., rye winner; E. W. Doubet of Hanna City, Ill., corn titlist; and Arthur Budarick of Palmer Rapids, Ont., potato champion, have promised to come.

Accented today was on dairy cattle judging, and Eastern Canadian farmers took over the win circle from Prairie entries.

Coalition Can't Last Forever, Wismer Tells Liberal Officers

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP).—Attorney-General Gordon Wismer said today that the British Columbia Liberal Party has no intention of breaking up coalition now.

Only a full Liberal "convention" could decide that the Liberals were to break away from the Progressive Conservatives, he said.

"Coalition can't last forever," he added when he addressed 150 executive members of the B.C. Liberal Association now in session here.

He said it would be impossible for two parties to continue indefinitely "in this arrangement."

"If they tried to, the Government eventually would become a Government of compromise and sometime would be voted out and the other party voted in." His other party reference was to the C.C.F.

Recent reports in political circles have said that Coalition—established in 1941—would be abandoned before the next provincial election in 1953. Mr. Wismer told the convention that he is 100 per cent behind Premier Byron Johnson.

He said there had been reports that he sought the premiership, but he denied them.

"There have been certain rumors circulating and I wish to answer them. I have no further political ambition. I am 100 per cent behind Boss Johnson."

Mr. Wismer paid tribute to Mr. Johnson as "one of the great Canadians of our time."

Caddy's Eastern Cousin Seen in Alligator Form

KENORA, Ont., Nov. 15 (CP)—The legendary Windigo has returned, this time to the wilds of far-Northwestern Ontario.

The tale of the strange monster was related by the Ontario Lands Office here. It said its information came from Leif Mammen, a fur trader at Poplar Hills Post, 200 miles due north of here on remote Berens Lake.

The Windigo, in the Northland, is what Ojopogo or Cadborosaurus is to British Columbia. But unlike the Western sea serpents, a Windigo has no set shape.

Leif Mammen's Windigo is supposed to have been seen first several months ago. He had an artistically-minded Indian draw him a picture. The Windigo resembles an alligator.

It has been reported seen again and one report is that it has been shot at—of course, unsuccessfully. The story is it comes out of the water, makes a sharp turn and allures underwater again. The

Tribal Queen, Former Stenographer, Longs for End of Exile in England

LONDON, Nov. 15 (Reuters).—The White Queen of the Bamangwato Tribe of Bechuanaland peeled potatoes today at the kitchen sink of a small apartment in London.

As she peeled she wondered when she and her husband Seretse Khama, banished Chieftain of the Bamangwato, could realize their dearest wish—to return with their baby to their tribe in Africa.

"Queen" Ruth, formerly a London stenographer, and her tall African husband left Africa in August under a five-year exile order from the British Government.

The Government excluded Seretse from the tribal reserve because, it said, his marriage to a white woman caused discussion in the tribe.

"Honey-blonde" Ruth deserted scullery pots and pans to peep at six-month-old Jacqueline, kicking happily in her buggy.

From the unpretentious five-roomed apartment provided by the Government, she looked down on the busy streets of Chelsea where she does her shopping and lines up for the family food rations.

CANT MAKE PLANS
Then she surveyed her sitting room, brightened only by skin rugs and colored baskets from Bechuanaland, and sighed.

"Nobody can know how much I long to have a house of our own."

Fighters of Reds Get New Technique As Resistance Spreads in U.S.S.R

By LEONARD J. SCHWETZER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (NANA).—A new technique of underground resistance to Communism, based on 20 years of experience in fighting Stalin on his own territory, has been put into operation by the National Alliance of Russian Solidarists, an organization which claims to represent a large proportion of Soviet Displaced Persons and to have a sizable clandestine membership inside the Soviet Union.

Prof. C. W. Bolydrev, a member of the Solidarist executive committee, who teaches at Georgetown University here, said that the Soviet power is too strong to be fought by the classic revolutionary method of a chain of connected cells.

His organization tried it that way for many years and found it was paying too great a price because the arrest of one member brought disaster to a large section of the underground network. Soviet torture methods proved too strong for the captive to resist and he soon incriminated many of his associates, Bolydrev explained.

His organization, usually referred to as the N.T.S. from its Russian initials, was organized by Russian emigres in Yugoslavia in 1939. Bolydrev, son of a famous White Russian general, was one of the founders.

After enlisting in the Yugoslav army when the Nazis attacked in 1940, Bolydrev was captured and imprisoned in a German concentration camp. He escaped and spent two and a half years in Nazi-occupied Russia organizing partisan bands which fought both the Wehrmacht and the Red Army.

Captured again by the Nazis, Bolydrev was rescued from his second German concentration camp by American troops in 1945. Since then, in Europe and here, he has devoted himself to perfecting new methods of fighting Communism.

The new plan, adopted by the N.T.S., incorporates what Bolydrev called a "disconnected chain of cells" with the same aims and ideals, with the same objectives and with uniform sets of opposition. No member is to know more than two or three others because he knows no more than that small number.

N.T.S. leaders inside Russia remain aloof from the tank and file and spend their time observing and directing the organization's propaganda which is sent in from secret headquarters in Western Europe.

LEAFLETS DROPPED

Leaflets, carried by balloons equipped with a mechanism which causes them to dump their cargo after they have traveled a fixed number of miles, are showered all over Russia. The leaflets explain why Communism is evil and sketch, in condensed fashion, the program the N.T.S. would substitute for it. The reader is then told that if he agrees with the program, he should enlist in the organization.

Enlistment consists of silent repeating the printed oath of allegiance. Simple instructions then follow. If recruits are members of the Government, army, or Communist Party, they are told to hold on to their positions and try to better them. They are to copy and distribute the leaflets.

"You are authorized to contact physically a maximum of three persons," the leaflets usually say.

The final order is to paint or draw a trident, the symbol of the organization, in some public spot, and to repeat as frequently as possible. Such small acts of resistance can be followed with impunity, Bolydrev said, and although recruits do not know who their comrades are, the repetition of the trident symbol gives them courage because they understand others are with them.

The Soviet Government is helpless to stop the leaflets from circulating unless it is prepared to imprison the whole population. Thus, the Government is made to appear ridiculous; a calamity for a totalitarian power.

SUPPORT REVOLT

N.T.S. does not expect that these recruits will start a revolution against Communism. It believes, however, that they will support a revolt when it is begun by the N.T.S. elite fighters.

As Bolydrev sees it, the principal job of the N.T.S. is to create a revolutionary atmosphere within the Soviet Union, under its slogan, printed on each leaflet: "We bring death to tyrants. We bring freedom to the toilers."

"Because there is hardly a Russian family which has not lost at least one member in a slave labor camp or before a Communist firing squad, there is latent political hatred of the Communist regime," Bolydrev said. "We don't have to create an opposition. Communism has already done that. What we wish to do is to provide a powerful stimulus to set off the revolt when the time comes."

FROM WITHIN

How will the revolt come? "The Russian Army is potentially capable of revolution. The soldiers are the same as the people from whom they spring, and there are Russian generals who are potential Vlasovs," Bolydrev explained.

His reference was to Russian General Vlasov, who, after his capture by the Germans, organized an army to fight against the Soviet Government. Vlasov, Bolydrev said, was not a member of the N.T.S., but the chief of staff, Gen. Fedor Trukhin, and other aides were. Vlasov was simply anti-Communist, and, having no political ideology of his own, he adopted the N.T.S. program, according to Bolydrev.

As an example of the influence of his organization, Bolydrev said that a clandestine newspaper, "For the Honor of the Fatherland," was published behind the Iron Curtain by sympathizers in the Red Army. In Eastern Germany a few months ago other sympathizers were said to produce a facsimile of the official Red Army newspaper, "The Soviet Army," and distribute it in place of the regular edition. The facsimile contained N.T.S. propaganda and the secret police were never able to learn how it was done.

DANGEROUS OPPONENT

Bolydrev himself is recognized as a dangerous opponent by the Soviet authorities. In 1948 a play, "On the Other Side," representing him as a traitor to Russia, was shown to Red Army audiences.

The N.T.S. has been attacked in some quarters as Fascist and anti-Semitic. Bolydrev, emphatically denied both charges. His group's program, he said, seeks free, democratic elections by the Russian people.

It advocates a parliament of two houses, one chosen as a result of regular party elections, the other composed of representatives of trades, industries, and professions. He believes the accusation of Fascism stems from confusing the second part of the N.T.S. platform with Mussolini's corporate state. He also maintains that the charge of anti-Semitism results from confusing his group with an anti-Semitic organization founded during the war by a small group of other Russian emigres.

Canada's Air Defence Pattern Gives Eastern Centres Priority

OTTAWA, Nov. 15 (CP).—The pattern of Canada's air defence program is gradually emerging with first priority for protection of the areas centred by Montreal and Toronto and the vital American regions to their south.

The pattern never has been and probably never will be spelled out publicly. But its emergence pieced itself together in the extension of an airfield here, the establishment of a radar base there, the choice of a base for a fighter squadron.

RECALL UNDERGROUND

LONDON (CP).—The R.A.P. Escaping Society met in London recently to plan a reunion in Paris with French Resistance patriots who helped them escape during the war. Air Marshal Sir Basil Embry, who escaped three times, was in the chair.

SMILED DESPITE PAIN

LONDON (CP).—Everyone, including the bridegroom's mother, smiled as pictures were taken of a wedding group in West Norwood. The mother, Mrs. Florence Townsend, 57, was taken away for treatment of a broken arm she had just suffered in a fall.

NEW RAILROAD DEPOT

OSLO (CP).—Plans have been completed here for a new central railroad station to replace Oslo's present two main-line depots. The new station, construction of which will be spread over 15 years, is to be built on the present site of the east station.

Next year will see the movement gain its greatest postwar momentum when two types of jet fighter planes come into production and establishment of new fighter squadrons takes on increased pace. Under joint plans for North American defence, this fighter development is probably Canada's main contribution.

JET PRODUCTION

It is already possible to discern the shape of a wide area of protection for the Montreal-Toronto areas in bases springing up or planned at places like Chatham, N.B., Beccoville, Que., and North Bay, Ont.

So far, Chatham is the only one to act as a peacetime fighter squadron base but work is going on or will go on at the others and there is speculation that they are part of the pattern. The R.C.A.F., however, has no comment.

HUB AT MONTREAL

On the map, these three fields loom as the outer rim of a wheel whose hub lies in Montreal with its air defence group headquarters as the nerve-center of the whole plan. Inside that rim, close to the choice targets, are regular squadrons at Montreal and Ottawa, two reserve squadrons at Toronto, a third at Hamilton.

There now are three regular fighter squadrons, based at Chatham, Montreal and Ottawa. At least three more are planned for 1951 and North Bay and Beccoville may well be bases for two of them.

Would Amend Hospital Plan For Pensioned

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP).—Attorney-General Gordon Wimmer said here today that the Government soon must face up to the question of hospital benefits for the dependents of pensioned soldiers.

"These men can't be expected to pay for hospital protection for their families," he said.

In an address at an executive meeting of the B.C. Liberal Association, Mr. Wimmer reviewed the Hospital Insurance Service.

"I wish people would wait until we get the reorganization complete before they condemn. I wish they would give us time."

He described the hospital service "as one of the greatest humanitarian reforms in my time."

U.S. Social Security Benefits Paid in Communist Countries

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (NANA).

The United States Government, with quiet surreptitiousness, is continuing to pay social security benefits to the tune of about $100,000 a year to 428 people living in countries behind the Iron Curtain.

There are even seven social security beneficiaries now living in Russia. They receive $2,346 a year.

These payments are made to people who worked in the United States long enough to qualify for social security and then returned to their native soil to live in retirement.

Continuing the payments is not a question of foreign policy, say social security officials—it's the law.

BELIEVED UNIQUE

As far as can be ascertained, the United States is the only country which delivers old-age benefits to people who are no longer living within its borders. The United Kingdom, for example, cancels the pensions of workers who migrate elsewhere.

The question of these payments did not arise when the United States Congress revamped social security legislation this year. The basis for them is the law's provision that anyone of any citizenship who works in a job covered by social security is entitled to the benefits accruing from his participation in the program.

State Department officials say they believe there is great propaganda value in the delivery of these cheques to the 428 people in Communist countries.

Total social security payments to people in other countries, for the year ending last June 30, amounted to $3,143,159. Almost one-third of this total was paid to Italians now living in Italy, but there were 87 other nations represented on the social security pension roll.

The Iron Curtain payments totaled $148,623 and were made to 227 people in Czechoslovakia ($68,510); to 94 people in Poland ($48,109); to 79 people in Hungary

($20,338); and to 19 people in Romania ($9,422). Yearly payments of $6,888 to Bulgarians were discontinued last March when our diplomats were forced to leave the country. This money is being held in reserve for eventual payment. Payments to beneficiaries in China, of $62,518 a year, have also been stopped.

Some 345 Yugoslavs are receiving United States social security cheques at the rate of $97,878 a year.

The total amounts of these new payments will increase under the new schedule of benefits that became effective in September. As the program is not expected to become self-sustaining for many years to come, the social security taxes paid by these people in their working years, come nowhere near covering the average of $336 a year that each is now receiving.

The beneficiaries are paid in dollars by United States Treasury cheques delivered by United States consuls in the various countries. It is the duty of these consuls to ascertain that the payee is still living, but no effort is made to determine whether he is employed at a wage rate that would render him ineligible for the benefits if he were still living in the United States.

There is little information as to how much material benefit the individuals receive from these United States cheques. There is some opinion that the cheques may actually get the payees in trouble with their suspicious governments. In Poland, for example, the recipient must exchange the dollars for zloties immediately, and there are other instances of close supervision.

On several occasions, various Communist governments have induced the beneficiaries to renounce the cheques with appropriate allure at the United States for Red propaganda purposes. However, this practice has been far from widespread and the general alarm with which the cheques are cashed shows a spirit of ready acceptance on the other side of the Iron Curtain.

Ex-Saboteur With Maquis Pounds Beat

TORONTO, Oct. 26 (C)—Len Thorne is the fellow who appeared in France one day before D-Day in the middle of a group of S.S. troops greeting Generals Rommel and Von Rundstedt. He joined them and was taking photographs of the generals and the troops when someone got suspicious and began asking questions.

He was taken prisoner but later escaped, with the help of the Maquis, the French underground.

A demolition expert with the Royal Canadian Engineers, Thorne started his in-again, out-again life as a saboteur in Europe after the fall of France. With other members of his unit, he was posted to train saboteurs in the Maquis.

MANY FORAYS
The little international group worked together so well that they were attached to various British and French commando units and made many trips to France and other occupied countries.

Their first big assignment was just before Dieppe. They went in and blew up gun emplacements and communications six hours before the main raid.

After several more trips into Europe by submarine and boat, Thorne was posted back to the Canadian Army. In the photography processing and observation group. It was during this period that he "met" Rommel and Von Rundstedt.

ROAD WORK
He was captured again shortly afterward in another foray. This time he was put to work in a labor camp, repairing roads which he and his comrades had persuaded French farmers to plough over the previous night.

Len's usual equipment reflected the two outfits he worked with. He carried pocketful of explosives and a tiny camera strapped under his arm.

The soft-speaking man is back in uniform again—pounding a beat in suburban Port Credit as a rookie policeman.

Leaking Gas Believed Cause of Leduc Explosion

Leaking natural gas is believed the cause of the explosion which killed ten persons as it wrecked the Leduc Hotel in Leduc, Alta. Force of the explosion collapsed the building, wrecked cars across the street. This photo was taken just as the hotel's coffee shop collapsed into the basement.

Increase in Toy Prices Anticipated in Britain

LONDON, Nov. 15 (CP)—This year's "Buy Early for Christmas" slogans are more than just a sales promotion in British toy stores.

Retailers warn that last-minute shoppers may pay ten per cent more for the same goods as those now on the shelves.

For instance, a train set now priced at £1 may cost 22 shillings if retail stocks are renewed before Christmas. Dolls and soft toys costing about 25 shillings, will rise to 30 shillings and up. Reason is the increased cost of raw materials.

Warning is also given on the uncertainty of replacements. Some toys now on the shelves may not be obtainable by Mid-December, due to the security in lead and metal caused by the rearmament program.

In most lines, however, London's big stores have large and varied stocks.

Biggest surprise in present stocks is the variety of clockwork toys. There is everything from inch-long cars costing 8d to remote control

Brooklyn Branded Area With Sloppiest Speech

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (NANA).

A nation-wide survey of United States accents brings Brooklyn to the top, tagged as the locality with the sloppiest speech in the country. Some of the best speech, according to President Max Sherover of the Linguaphone Institute of America, sponsors of the study, is found in Milwaukee, Tulsa and Dallas. Hollywood, city of actors, rates "inferior" in diction.

Specific findings on other towns as reported in Pathfinder Magazine: Ypsilanti, Mich.—"Too much emphasis on the r, obvious in enunciation of such words as 'shirt,' 'shirk' and 'third.' Poor diction."

Chicago—"The speech pattern has a breathless quality, characterized by 'lenition.' There is a rush to get the words out. Chicagoans sound as if they were running for trains. This explosive tendency makes for poor enunciation."

TYPICAL OF SOUTH

Atlanta—"Its speech patterns are typical of the lazy South. Too much hesitation between words, rather than between syllables. Most words are excessively drawn out in the typical Dixie manner."

Hollywood—"A highly varied speech pattern, due to the presence of people from all over the United States, yet characterized generally by slurring pronunciation, diction and enunciation inferior."

SAMPLES TAKEN

To get its findings, L.I.A. uses a sampling method. In Chicago, for example, a recording device was set up on various streets. Passers-by were asked to speak into a microphone, as if for a radio interview. Then each was given a paragraph to read.

In all, about 800 recordings were made in Chicago alone, about 75 per cent on the street and 25 per cent in homes and offices. In smaller cities like Ypsilanti, between 200 and 250 were interviewed. An effort is made to include "all economic strata" of a community.

Sherover thinks that in the United States as a whole the speech pattern is improving. "Young people coming back from college bring with them better pronunciation, diction and enunciation."

Add Sherover: "Nobody has been

Missionary Sails Home From North

MONTREAL, Nov. 15 (CP).—A 63-year-old English woman missionary who spent 21 years in Canada's unsettled Northland, sailed for home today wearing battered mukluks and parka, her trademark among the settlers of Northern British Columbia.

Miss Monica Storr, an Anglican missionary and a sister of Sir Ronald Storr, famous commander of Lawrence of Arabia fame, plans to retire in the quiet of the English countryside.

"When I first went north in British Columbia there were only about 70 settlers in the little town of Fort St. John," Miss Storr said. "I lived with a pioneer settler and later built my own log house. Now there are 15,000 inhabitants in the town."

"Our parish there covered about 2,000 square miles and I traveled for 18 years on horseback because of lack of roads," she said.

She was sorry to leave Northern British Columbia but "I feel some younger person should carry on the work."

Contributions From Well-Wishers Help Invalids Build New Careers

TORONTO, Nov. 15 (CP).—Two started.

suburban Toronto girls, unknown to each other until after separate accidents paralyzed them both from the waist down, soon will head into a new venture made possible by well-wishers.

Nancy McComb, 22, of Long Branch and Doreen Taylor, 19, of Weston, are going into business for themselves by organizing a telephone answering service. It will be conducted from a building being erected as a combine home and office from contributions of money and material.

They became acquainted while convalescing at Lyndhurst Lodge, in Toronto. Doreen permanently injured her spine in May, 1946, when she fell from a bridge over the Humber River. Seven months later Nancy was struck down by a truck.

Public-spirited citizens in New Toronto, adjoining Long Branch, formed a committee to aid Nancy, then only 18 and second youngest of eight children whose mother was dead. Their father died a few months after Nancy's accident.

The committee raised $6,000, nearly half of which went towards medical treatment. The remainder is going to be used to help build the new home and office for the girls. It is planned to raise another $8,500 and the Canadian Paraplegic Association intends to lend money to get the building and any other free days to get the building finished. The girls hope to move in early in January. The one-story building will have special ramps running from the street level to the doors so they can enter all their wheel chairs without assistance. The building will have five rooms—two bedrooms, kitchen, living-dining-room and office.

Great Figures Of Canada In Sculpture

TORONTO, Nov. 16 (CP)—Undisturbed by the roar of today's automobiles, four great figures of Canadian history stare solemnly down on bustling north-south traffic artery of Queen's Park Crescent.

Nine-foot stone haut relief sculptures of Champlain, Wolfe, Simcoe, and Brock stand perched on the limestone walls of the new University of Toronto Archives Building.

Inside, history books record their part in the molding of Canada.

The figures, one of the largest single sculpture commissions ever undertaken in Canada, are the work of Josephine Jones of suburban York Mills. They took 11 months to create, not counting long months of research to provide authentic likenesses and dress.

STUDIED CHARACTER
 Before starting actual work, Miss Jones set about studying the character of each man, sorting out proved material from the doubtful. She was aided by the Dominion Archives, the Ontario Archives and the Chateau de Ramsay in Montreal.

The figures seem to grow out of the wall. They project one foot and are half round. Carefully selected pieces of Quebec limestone were used.

Samuel de Champlain, the founder of Quebec, holds a plan of the first habitation of Quebec in his right hand. The other holds a pair of dividers.

James Wolfe, who conquered Quebec City for the English more than a century later, clasps a closed telescope, just as he might have while planning his famous attack.

John Graves Simcoe is portrayed in his role as a serious governor of the young colony. He holds a cane in his right hand and looks sternly out into space.

Gen. Isaac Brock, the hero of Queenston Heights in the war of 1812, is sculptured as slim and athletic.

Old World Recipes Include One for Rose Petal Jelly

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Classical Old World recipes—the kind considered family heirlooms and handed only from mother to daughter—are being collected and scientifically recorded.

An American recipe for rose petal jelly was supplied by a 71-year-old woman. A Philadelphia housewife, she offered an intricate recipe for Rose Petal Jelly, a delicacy that has been the pride of her family for generations.

Another recipe, provided for Rose Petal Jelly, was for a jelly made from rose petals and sugar. The recipe was handed down from her grandmother, who was a famous cook in her day.

In Garments Trade Grows

WINNIPEG, Nov. 16 (CP)—Manitoba's garment industry has grown from one small outfitting plant at the turn of the century to almost 200 plants producing a wide range of clothing and accessories for men, women and children.

Touted the start of the industry, the garment manufacturers' association of Western Canada has issued a series of public reports showing the growth of the industry.

These figures show that in 1949 the garment industry in Manitoba was worth $1,000,000, up from $500,000 in 1948.

Manufacturers who took the first step were told that the industry was growing rapidly and that they should expand their operations.

LAURENCE
 H. H. Guttman, executive secretary of the association, said Winnipeg's garment industry is growing rapidly and that they should expand their operations.

Official Calls for Long View On Extending Nanaimo Borders

By GORDON FORBES
Colonist Staff Reporter

NANAIMO, Nov. 15.—Chamber of Commerce president, Bruce Armstrong, today called on residents to another their personal feelings in connection with the contentious extension issue and try to consider the over-all picture.

Declaring that if Nanaimo is to progress, the city boundaries must be extended, Mr. Armstrong asked people to "think of the benefit as a whole rather than individually, because if the whole area benefits then the individual will, too."

The chamber has been active in the move to extend the boundaries for about two years, but the issue has been discussed in varying forms here for years. The proposal is to extend the boundaries to Hecwood's Seventh street on the south side, Wakelish Avenue on the west side to Comox Road, the Brechin area bound by Waddington Hill Road on the west side and Brechin Hill Road on the north.

BIG INCREASES

The plan would increase the city's population from the present 7,200 to about 16,000. It would increase the area of the city about 2½ times.

City Named After Father

First Mayor of Duncan Recalls Past Marked by Hard Work, Slow Change

DUNCAN, Nov. 15.—This city's first mayor, Kenneth Duncan, is a "walking history book" when it comes to recalling the district's colorful past.

The city was named after his father, William C. Duncan, who came to British Columbia from Ontario during the Cariboo gold rush.

Mr. Duncan, who is in the real estate business here, was only 30 when he was elected mayor at the incorporation of Duncan, in 1912. He was elected by acclamation.

"There was no pay for the council and I remember we worked very hard drafting suitable by-laws. Meetings were held every week for a long time. The municipality of North Cowichan, which is one of the oldest in British Columbia, was very helpful to us," recalled Mr. Duncan.

Going back many more years, Mr. Duncan said the railway went through in 1887. Up to that time all travel had been by water. Cowichan Bay and Maple Bay being the big centres. But when the railroad came, he said, travel was shifted towards Duncan—then known only as Duncan's Crossing. There was no station until 1889. The vicinity of the station, Mr. Duncan explained, was quite dense bush. His father, who was a farmer, owned the property on which the townsite was built. The railroad changed a lot of things, the first mayor stated. The agricultural society used to meet at Maple Bay but later moved to Duncan. The lending library did likewise.

The very first people in the district were Hudson's Bay Company employees. The first white man to settle, according to Mr. Duncan, was John Humphries. Mr. Duncan was from Eastern Canada and worked for the Hudson's Bay Company and by contract had to stay five years. He had been fur scouting.

He liked the country, and settled down to farm. He built his cabin close to what is now St. Peter's Church. Humphries, Mr. Duncan said, married the daughter of the chief of the Quamichan band of the Cowichan Indian tribe.

The first missionary was Father Roudesill who paddled a canoe all the way from Victoria. He is said to have come from Quebec "burning with zeal" and at first was sent to college in Victoria. He didn't like this and told his superiors he would go back East if he was not sent out on missionary work with the Indians. He was granted his wish. He came in about 1890 and died about 1900.

Mr. Duncan said Cowichan was a settlement area as early as 1862. The first land titles came from the Hudson's Bay Company.

Wrapp Not in Favor of Renewing Police Contract

DUNCAN, Nov. 15.—Mayor J. C. Wrapp said he was in favor of the R.C.M.P. but not in favor of renewing the contract. "We do not have much crime in this city. If we had a police force of our own we could use it for all sorts of duties the R.C.M.P. will not handle," he explained.

The present police contract expires at the end of December, and the city will have to sign a new contract with the R.C.M.P. or raise a police force of its own. Changes in the contract since the R.C.M.P. took over the Provincial Police were presented to the City Council recently.

If the city signs the R.C.M.P. contract it will have to pay for jail guards and matrons, provide sleeping quarters for single constables, and foot a bill of $1,400 for each constable yearly, as well as $70 monthly car mileage. The city will also pay for supplies, stationery and part of the rental of the police building.

Under the new contract, constables policing the city would not act on calls outside city limits, and municipal and unorganized territories would be similarly defined and divided. The contract could be terminated by either side with six months' notice.

Altermen will renew talks on the contract before the expected signing time, which will probably be in the middle of December, according to G. M. Berry, city clerk.

Alberni Bonds Change Hands

ALBERNI, Nov. 15.—Pemberton & Sons, Ltd., Vancouver, telegraphed the City of Alberni confirming purchase of $25,000 worth of city school bonds, and requested an extension of an option on the balance of $75,000.

Alberni were not in favor of the extension, and recommended that the balance be sold to the Bank of Montreal at 98½.

Ald. Charles Taylor recommended that the city be authorized to pledge road paving bonds to the Bank of Montreal as security for an advance of $50,000.

Appear in New Attire

PORT ALBERNI, Nov. 15.—Members of the local R.C.M.P. detachment have been provided with new brown serge uniforms, gold-colored buttons and white nylon lanyards.

Hold Services

DUNCAN, Nov. 15.—Funeral services for the late Christopher Storey, 80, who died in hospital, were held Wednesday afternoon in St. Mary's Church, Sonoma. Burial followed in the church cemetery. Hirst Funeral Chapel was in charge of arrangements.

Mr. Storey was born in England. He was visiting Youbou, and had been in the district only eight weeks. He lived at New Westminster for 16 years. He was a retired C.N.R. employee, having been with the company 46 years. He is survived by his widow, three sons, Clifford, Frank and George; five daughters, Mrs. L. J. Ryder in Saskatchewan, Mrs. A. G. Fowler in England, Mrs. Leslie Hearsey in Ontario, Mrs. Lloyd Hearsey in Youbou, and Mrs. E. Holloway in Saskatchewan.

THE DISC "ROCKY"

On the border of Autumn we stand right now, ahead is the gauntness of every bough. A few lonely penants are flying high, half-defiant in a hostile sky. No sun or moon, dusk or dawn, this middle of November, just a hanger-on. It's depressing, it's negative. It's a gloomy down, it will, if you let it. . . get U down. About the only bright spot in this somber day, the ghost walks, it's pay-day. It's especially mournful when the fog rolls in, & those horns on the trucks, dirge their din. How those keepers suck it, I'll never know, right under those horns that sadly blow. I find myself, when counting sheep, bass-profoundly, "Asleep In the Deep." Picturing sailors in torn pants & socks, clinging out there on to Race Rocks. More efficient I think, & we could better resist 'em, if those Keepers were equipped with a P.A. system. And when the fog closed on a tug with a scow, he could say, "There's a rock here . . . watch it now." And then this ad-libbing go-between, could put on that record, "Good Nine Lane." Which reminds me that yesterday in our store, a couple were wandering about the main floor. When I went up & sed, "How do you do, can I be of any help to you?" "We're just looking around, most we have seen." "Which one," said the husband, "do U like Irene?" "I guess," I remarked, as I heard her name, "you're sick of that record of the same name." "Brother, I've heard it a million times, I wish I could have added that final blow. When the other nite on those "Sanctum" hits, Ed. Farley smashed it to beautiful bits." But I have stayed in the fog, as unneeded, on my course I'd better slog. 'Twas just an idea, silly & rocky, imagine a Light-Housekeeper, as a disc-jockey. He'd have us all gulping aspirins, as over the waves came his needles & spins. But apart from this gloom, we should remember, the rewards are many in November. The living-room fire sparkles heigho, & glowingly bids us watch it's show. And pretty soon, now, an elf, it'll, you'll find yourself . . . getting used to it. And then in the yard you'll probably reason, this week-end's raking, the last of the season. And while you're raking, if you're like me, a word-dious lesson of Nature you will see. ABUNDANCE, I think, you will agree, is the central theme of every tree. Thousands more leaves, than appear to be needed, & yet we are fearful, signs go unneeded. And the thot of snow, makes us shudder, as we let go, the helm to the rudder. Which is steering us steady through fog & rain, till those horns are silenced, and IT'S SPRING AGAIN.

Board Discusses School For Courtenay District

COURTENAY, Nov. 15.—A junior-senior high school for Courtenay was recommended by Trustee W. E. Mantle at a meeting of the board of Courtenay School District No. 71.

The suggestion was put forward as a means of relieving the present overcrowded condition at Courtenay schools and of giving good educational facilities to high school students.

Trustee Mantle said such a school would take students from Grade VII to Grade XII from the Courtenay area as far south as Union Bay, and possibly Panny Bay.

Trustee Stanley Venables, whose plan for a complete new building program for District No. 71 is now under consideration by the board, stated the idea broached by Trustee Mantle was, in effect, the 1949 building by-law which had been defeated by the ratepayers.

Trustee Mantle denied this, stating the school he proposed was not a consolidated high school for all high school pupils in the district, as had been set forth in the defeated by-law.

G. W. Stubbs, Courtenay Elementary School principal, who was invited to take part in the discussion, said the idea of a junior-senior high school had been tried in other British Columbia centres and that it had not met with much success.

NOT GOOD PRACTICE
"It works mechanically, but it has not been found good practice to put age groups of the Grade VII, VIII and IX type in the same building with those of Grades XII and XIII," he said.

Trustee Stubbs said Courtenay Parent-Teacher Associations felt similarly about the subject, and thought that a by-law offering this type of school would have little chance of acceptance by the ratepayers.

Trustee Venables said the plan he had offered the board had been designed to appeal to the ratepayers. He added that it was a plan which would fill into a larger building program in later years.

SEES DIFFICULTIES
Trustee S. D. Donaldson foresaw difficulty in getting accredited teachers of the type needed for a junior-senior high school, and wanted to know how the board would go about eliminating present teachers who did not possess these qualifications.

Trustee Mantle's suggestion will be discussed more fully at a later meeting.

In other business conducted at the meeting, the board secretary declared that of three applicants for the position of traveling secretary to the various school principals in the area, two were "two-fingered typewriter artists," while the third was unable to spell.

Sioux Helps Koreans On Storm-Tossed Tug

MARINE AND TRAVEL NEWS

"Canadian Navy—good navy." So said a group of 27 South Koreans after their rescue in a raging storm by the destroyer H.M.C.S. Sioux recently.

Twenty-two South Korean troops within half an hour they were as good as new.

NEW PROBLEM
"We asked them if they would like something to eat and discovered they hadn't had any food since noon the day before."

A new problem arose after crew members led the Koreans to the cafeteria.

"We got them fixed up with food, silverware and dishes," related A.B. Hill, "and we waited for them to dig in."

"They looked around a little nervously but did nothing. Then one guy picked up his fork and began using it the wrong way around."

"We caught on then. What they needed was chopsticks. Some of our boys went to their lockers and got out chopsticks they had bought as souvenirs in Japan. They gave these to the South Koreans and everybody was happy," Lord said.

REPAIR ENGINE
Meanwhile, Lieut. George C. Stewart, engineer of the Sioux, and P.O. Nick Grabas tackled the tug's balky engine and, in 2½ hours, had it back in working order.

Supply and medical personnel packed boxes of food and pills for the South Koreans and soon they were on their way again with the passing boat.

"Canadian navy—good navy."

STRIKE VOTE
Five hundred Puget Sound shipyard machinists will take a strike vote Monday to support their demands for a 15-cent hourly pay increase.

I. A. Sandvigen, business agent for Hope Lodge 79, International Association of Machinists (I.M.), said the wage demand had been made upon 30 shipyards and marine shops in the Seattle area.

TO PLAN DETAILS
Andrew MacClements, assistant marine superintendent for the Department of Transport, arrived in Victoria yesterday.

He is here to take part in arranging details for the inauguration of the North Pacific Weather Ship Service, scheduled for November 25.

PULP IMPORTED
First shipment of strawberry pulp from Holland for jam-making was unloaded here yesterday at Ogden Point by the Holland-America Line's Mv. Duivendyk.

The pulp has been shipped to British Columbia before, but yesterday's eight-ton consignment was thought to be the first ever sent to the Victoria district, well known for its strawberry-growing industry.

The Dutch pulp can be purchased much more cheaply than local berries, according to a packer, who said the saving, even with transportation costs, is as much as 25 per cent.

Though not scheduled for Victoria, blackberries are also due to be imported into the province soon from Ireland.

NEED LOST BOAT
The Federal Fisheries Department patrol vessel Atlin Post and two herring seiners are searching for a salmon gillnetter with Y. Mitsuhashi, Canadian-Japanese fisherman, aboard, according to a report received last night from Nanaimo.

The gillnetter was last seen in the vicinity of Snake Island, approximately ten miles outside Nanaimo harbor. It is believed the vessel may have been swamped, or driven farther out into the Gulf of Georgia in a strong gale which swept the coast Tuesday night.

Defence Minister Visits Work Point

Oak Bay Firemen Seek $50 to $70 Pay Boosts

Oak Bay firemen are asking for monthly wage boosts ranging from $50 to $70, Reeve F. A. Gibbs said at a municipal council meeting last night.

The Reeve termed the requests "formidable" and said negotiations are continuing.

Oak Bay Municipal Employees' Association, the Reeve added, has asked for wage increases of $30 across the board. A meeting with association representatives is being arranged.

Reeve Gibbs appointed A. S. G. Musgrave, municipal engineer, Police Chief H. C. F. Reston, Fire Chief E. G. Clayards and Dr. Neil Stewart, medical health officer, to attend an address by Major-Gen.

City to Pay Share
ALBERNI, Nov. 15.—A money by-law calling for a $45,000 contribution—from Alberni towards the cost of a new $953,400 hospital to serve Alberni Valley will be placed before voters next month. Port Alberni will be required to raise $136,500.

FIRING PRACTICE
Light anti-aircraft firing practice will be carried out from Albert Head from 0900 hours to 1600 hours on November 23 and 24, the Department of National Defence announced yesterday.

Practice will be carried out seaward in an area between Race Rocks to Brothie Ledge. The danger radius will be 12,000 yards.

City Manager Studying Development of Victoria

Two steps vital to the smooth operation of council-manager government have been taken in the six weeks since the plan started here, City Manager C. C. Wyatt yesterday told a luncheon meeting of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

The first of these steps was the institution of regular fortnightly meetings of department heads, designed to promote "a communal understanding" of all phases of Victoria administration.

The second step came with the granting by council of authority to establish a personnel department. The city manager stated that under new personnel arrangements, requests for additional staff would be closely scrutinized from the standpoint of need and whether money had been appropriated for new jobs.

Mr. Wyatt advised that any further plans or projects were not yet developed to a point which permitted discussion.

He declared he saw in council-manager government another example of history repeating itself in Victoria.

STUDYING HISTORY
In this connection, he disclosed that he was undertaking a study of the city's history and had noted the great progress achieved in Victoria in the past 100 years.

When the first town clerk was appointed in 1862 he was called on to act as assessor, collector and treasurer and fulfill a number of other duties in addition to those of clerk, according to the city manager.

"As the city grew, these duties were divided among other individuals and later other departments," he said.

Mr. Wyatt said this system was efficient and effective up to the point where the work of the various departments became so complex and comprehensive that the department became autonomous "and interrelation between departments was lost sight of."

Finally, council-manager government was instituted to co-ordinate city administration, he said.

UNDERSTANDS INTEREST
Mr. Wyatt declared he understood the reason for the interest displayed by real estate interests in civic government.

"It seems to me when you sell a building you are at the same time selling municipal services, for unless such services are properly supplied the purchaser is not getting all he anticipated," asserted the city manager. "Because of that your interest in municipal government should be maintained."

Russell Ker, in thanking Mr. Wyatt for his address, declared the city manager had started in the right way by digging back into the history of Victoria.

"This board extends its appreciation of the work you are doing," he said. "We look forward to better times in Victoria under your management."

Varied Program

Good Audience Enjoys Shakespearean Evening

A near-capacity audience enjoyed an evening with Shakespeare last night at the Christ Church Memorial Hall.

The varied and well-presented program touched on a Shakespearean play—"Midsummer Night's Dream"—with the Victoria College Theatre production of "Love's Labour's Lost."

It included four selections by eight violinists under the direction of Dorothy Francis. The group played the numbers brightly and with keen vigor. They chose Saraband-Allegretto-Hornpipe, Air, Gavotte-Air and Pavane.

Two separate presentations of Shakespearean songs by Dr. K. M. King and Mrs. Marion Campbell were well received.

The technical polish of Pianist Malcolm Hamilton was loudly applauded.

Colorful ceremonies marked the 800th anniversary of Tjollling Church near Tonsberg, in Eastern Norway.

Paintings by Local Artists Hung In New Arts Centre Exhibition

By JOHN KYLE

A new exhibition of pictures by local artists opened this week at the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria on Broughton Street.

It includes 30 pictures, oils and watercolors, but there are no pastels and it is much to be regretted that there is no sculpture.

It has been well said that art which is best worth having is that which ordinary men practise for their own pleasure, because it is out of such that great art arises. Where there are only highly-trained professional artists, art itself is without roots. So here we are at the root of the matter.

In the oil section of this exhibition, two of the most interesting pictures are "Harmony in Green" and "A Golden Glow," which might have been called "Harmony in Yellow."

WORTH NOTE

These pictures, by E. L. Unthoff, show a combination of bold, direct workmanship, without neglect of drawing and composition, and are worthy of special attention.

Hanging near is "Pewee Bowl," a name given to a large, harmonious, well-composed still life painting by H. Wylie.

Not so successful, however, is "An Old Copper Mine" by the same artist. It is nicely composed, but is treated rather timidly and lacks variety.

To quote the words of a Chinese artist: "Excess does not consist in multiplicity of detail, nor does it consist in bare simplicity."

T. T. Carpenter has painted "Sunday Morning, Cape Cod." The fishing boats are at anchor and a feeling of absolute rest prevails. All the fishermen are at church. Nevertheless, least, the artist could well afford to indulge in some heroics while painting, because he is perfectly good draughtsman.

EYE CARRIED

W. B. Milne has made an acceptable picture of "Potholes Farm." The fields carry the eye away to the distant mountains and all is painted with a very fluent brush.

In "Ballet of the Trees" by Margaret Izard, we see trees painted freely and rhythmically in splendid color. "Firs at Cliff Edge" by H. Olyde is a small work, but although painted with ease and confidence, it is rather heavy in color.

Mrs. D. Williams is to be commended for having the only symmetrical picture in the gallery. There is nothing realistic about the figure depicted. He is a creation of the imagination and is looking and reaching upward, evidently urged on to higher things.

Another figure subject is a three-quarter length oil portrait painted in an unaffected manner with harmonious, pleasing colors. This is by Elizabeth Goward.

CAUGHT EXPRESSION

A striking portrait in watercolor of "A Young Korean Girl" by Mrs. Siggy is worthy of attention. She has caught a fleeting, momentary expression and although painted meticulously, it is not labored.

"The Negro Girl" by the same artist is not so striking—the background is too much in evidence and competes with the figure.

"Teddy" by Eleanor Izard is a carefully-drawn portrait and very acceptable.

The watercolors as a group prove that the painters appreciate the medium in which they are working. For the most part, the colors are kept clean and rich; overworking is not indulged in to any extent and it is not possible to mistake their pictures for oil colors.

"Waterfront, Wharf Street" is a most successful piece of work by Muriel Barnes, "November Evening" by the same artist is simple, direct work with a glow of color.

SEEMS TO FIT

"Ah! Waste land," I heard a spectator say, and that seems a very appropriate title.

C. T. Cunningham has a direct scene entitled "Court House, Victoria" and also "Stone Church, Cowichan Bay." In both of these he proves that he can paint buildings with suggestive titles. He knows that part of his drawing must be left out and he leaves it.

Constance Bonner usually sends pictures beautifully drawn, but in this case, "Storm Over Mount Freshfield, Canadian Rockies," is just a bit confused. Had she drawn the mountains and glaciers in her usual style and then dashed on the paint in stormy fashion, the confused effect would have been avoided.

The same can be said about Owen Goward's "High Noon, Ogden Point." The sky and mountains are too confused.

HARD TO BEAT

"Shacks in Happy Land" by Muriel Bland, and "Piper Park, Nanaimo," by the same artist, are difficult subjects to treat successfully. One centre of interest should be evident and all the rest should be subservient to it.

The same may be said about "Old Houses, Nanaimo" and "Old Houses, Esquimalt," by Unity Baile. They are daintily, but not very artistically painted.

"Vermilion Lake" and "In the Rockies" by B. Hill are effective water colors. The first is the better of the two and has an appropriate warm tone over all. The second is boldly treated with white paper left for effective lights.

In "Derelict," however, by Doris M. Rose, there is perhaps too much white paper left. The attention is diverted all over the picture. Whereas, in "The Water Tower, Port Angeles" by Will Menelaus, the eye is taken from the foreground right to the water tower which is the centre of interest.

SHOWS CONFIDENCE

"Poppies After Rain" by Florence Hawkins shows a beautifully-contrived group of flowers painted in a direct, confident manner.

"Rings and Haws" by Isabel Hobbs is also well grouped and painted in such a manner that although the hips and haws are small in size, yet the mass effect is successful.

"Water Lilies" by the same artist is of quite another type, painted solidly in body color. The panel design has been carefully arranged and is restrained in color.

Do not fail to see the works of our local artists. A visit to the Art Centre will be amply repaid.

Contractors Hear Taylor

According to a survey conducted by the National Electrical Contractors' Association among 9,000 of its members, bidding below cost is the principal cause for the chaotic condition of the industry.

R. J. Taylor, chartered accountant, told a recent meeting of the Victoria Electrical Association.

Mr. Taylor outlined methods of systematic business control, including accounting and job cost records, as the cure.

He listed various aspects of overhead costs inherent in every business, which, he said, were often overlooked by the working contractor.

CITY COURT

A charge of taking a car without the owner's consent against Frank B. Whitney, naval rating, was withdrawn by Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court yesterday at the request of City Prosecutor Claude L. Harrison.

The prosecutor said investigations had shown Whitney was not aware he had been picked up in a stolen car. Other investigations, he added, are continuing. The car was owned by David Miller, 238 Douglas Street.

William J. L. Todd, charged with the theft of two bicycles, was remanded to Friday for trial.

Speed Big Factor

Hundreds of Donations Needed To Provide Gifts for Troops

Hundreds of Victorians will have to pour contributions into the Mayor's office at City Hall within the next few days if the men of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry are to have any gifts for Christmas.

The Mayor's office has been made available to receive gifts to the P.P.C.L.I. in Korea Christmas Fund. The City Hall was an effective rallying point for aid to Britain, and is expected to be one again.

Seldom has there been such an acute need for speeding forwarding donations. At least $1,000 must be available early next week if minimum requirements are to be met. Any total above $1,000 will improve the lot of the men.

Sparking the drive are three former officers of the famous regiment—Brigadier W. G. Colquhoun, Lieut.-Col. Macgregor Macintosh, and Capt. George Harrison, president of the regimental association here.

History of the P.P.C.L.I. proves graphically that the regiment is more than entitled to the best possible Christmas this year.

Brig. Colquhoun yesterday recalled the 1914 and 1939 Yuletide record of the regiment.

In 1914, as the only Canadian infantry regiment in France up to that time, the Pats were digging trenches in thick mud near French headquarters. No mail, no parcels, no Christmas dinner.

In 1939, the regiment, on its way to the World War, was at sea, with ack-ack guns fully manned and the Royal Canadian Navy dropping depth charges. This time, the men ate, and enjoyed a sing-song, but still no mail and no contact with home.

DEPEND ON RESPONSE

"It will be snow and Red this year," the brigadier said, "unless Victorians do something about it. Their Christmas is going to depend entirely on the response of Canadians to this appeal. We ex-officers are confident that it will be a generous response."

The gifts for the men will be guaranteed for delivery Christmas Day, Brig. Colquhoun said. In fact, parcels will be in the hands of quartermasters' stores right in Korea. If necessary, the men can draw rations, ammunition and Christmas gifts all at once.

"This is a truly Western battalion, chosen to be the first in battle because of outstanding training and discipline. These fine young sportsmen deserve Victoria's backing to the hilt."

ADVANCE FORCE

Brig. Colquhoun said also, that plans were being made to provide the same Christmas cheer for nearly 400 men in the Canadian advance force now in Korea.

The brigadier said that donations may be sent to the Mayor's office or to Capt. Harrison at the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Fort and Government Streets. All subscribers of $5 or more will be given official receipts for income tax purposes.

Full backing for the fund came yesterday from many sources. His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace said he was "very happy to learn of this worthy and necessary appeal. I feel all British Columbia citizens will be delighted to assist to the maximum of their ability in providing Christmas comforts for the Canadian troops in Korea."

1/2 cup brown sugar

Peel the apples and slice into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with the granulated sugar and cinnamon. Combine the butter, sugar and brown sugar, and spread mixture on top of the apples. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until apples are soft and top is a golden brown. Serve 6.

If the 40-lb. box is too large for your needs, ask your grocer for the new smaller, "JUNIOR" box.

Injured Goalie Ready to Play

MONTREAL, Nov. 15 (CP)—Goalie Gerry McNeil of Montreal Canadiens hobbled out of hospital today and said he will be ready to play tomorrow night against Toronto Maple Leafs when the two National Hockey League teams meet here.

McNeil was laid up with a ruptured blood vessel in the right ankle. The injury has been responding to treatment and it now is believed McNeil will return to the nets. Plans had been made to replace him tomorrow with either Gordie Bell, from Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League, or Jacques Plante, neiminder for the Montreal Senior Royals.

Frenchman Seems Sure To Lead British Racing

LONDON, Nov. 15 (CP)—Britain's flat-racing season ends Saturday with eyes fixed ruefully in the usual direction—across the Channel into France.

Whatever happens in the next three days, it's almost certain that the leading owner on the British turf will be a Frenchman who is only third in his country.

By another of racing's perversities, the leading trainer seems sure to be a former jockey from France who hasn't even visited Britain this year.

COLLECTS £57,000

The two foreign horsemen who between them won most of Britain's big-money prizes are millionaire Marcel Boussac, who has collected a cool £57,000 (about $171,000) with horses bred at his Chantilly Stud, and his trainer, C. H. Semblat. Marcus Marsh, trainer for the Aga Khan, still has a chance to overhaul Semblat, but the betting's on the Frenchman.

Boussac made his biggest bag in three English classics, winning the Derby with Galador, the Oaks with Asmena and the St. Leger with Scratch II. In France, although scoring 41 times with 132 runners, Boussac was third to Baron Guy de Rothschild and hotel owner Francois Dupre.

As in other postwar seasons, sports writers agreed that the Gallic triumphs could be attributed to one
